How to Meet the Annual Plood.
Captain Merrill, of the U. S. Engineers, makes the following suggestions: "In my judgment, the easiest and cheapest plan is to abandon the bottom to business, and build all louses with a view to possible floods. Well built brick or stone houses have invariably withstood the floods without other injury than a wetting. I would recommend that the second stories be placed at least two feet above the flood line of this year, that extra good foundations be secured, that the walls be laid in cement, and that they be made thick enough to carry on the second floor everything that would have to be placed there when the lower floor was abandoned. The most important point is to get the laboring people aw y from the flooded district so as to lessen the appeal for charity, which can not always be met with the abundant resources that were poured out this year and has SOLTHERN METHODIST GROWTH.
